DAILY BRIEF

25X1 [] Congo: [] Gizenga's transfer on 3 February to an island in the Congo river estuary was a precautionary move approved by Adoula prior to his departure for the United States. Government leaders were worried about the number of contacts Gizenga was able to manage and were afraid he might be harmed or escape. One report states that Gizenga was attempting to bribe his captors, including Sureté chief Nendaka, who is in charge of the physical arrangements for Gizenga's detention.)

25X1 [] The government on 2 February instituted police and troop patrols in Leopoldville and alerted UN forces there in the face of reports that unemployed Africans--there are some 70,000 in the city--were planning antigovernment, anti-UN demonstrations. These demonstrations are reportedly motivated by economic distress. (Previous reports have indicated that Gizengists would try to mount pro-Gizenga civil disturbances.)

[] Ethiopian UN forces have moved from Stanleyville to Kindu, Kivu Province, as part of a UN plan to re-establish control in northern Katanga. Swedish troops, now in Elisabethville, are also scheduled to participate. New strains have arisen between UN and Union Miniere officials in Katanga over the UN's continued occupation of the company's buildings and the UN limit on railroad service. On 1 February company officials threatened to stop paying their African employees if the UN did not evacuate Union Miniere buildings by 5 February. []

[REDACTED]

Morocco-USSR: [REDACTED] King Hassan II reportedly has decided to accept a Soviet invitation to visit Moscow. No specific date is indicated, but Ambassador Bonsal thinks the visit might take place in conjunction with a trip the King is considering to India and Pakistan in March. The Soviet invitation goes back at least to February 1961, when Soviet President Brezhnev made an unofficial visit to Morocco.]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Hassan presumably views a trip to Moscow as furtherance of Morocco's foreign policy of "nonalignment," and as an opportunity to enhance his position at home and abroad. Soviet leaders may use the occasion for further discussion of offers of economic credits. [REDACTED]
